

CENTER FOR RESPONSIBLE LEADERSHIP

The Rowan Center for Responsible Leadership (RCRL) is seeking applications for our Summer 2023 cohort of Research Fellows!

RCRL is dedicated to examining the relationships between business and society. In particular, the mission of the Center is to examine the roles of business in society, with particular regard to sustainability, social impact, and business ethics. We aim to support the implementation of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals and the Principles of Responsible Management Education (PRME) on our campus and beyond.

The purpose of the RCRL Research Fellows program is to support high-quality faculty research aligned with the Center's mission. To that end, the program will support at least one project with a focus on sustainability and at least one project with a focus on diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI). We are particularly interested in supporting research projects that are in the early stage (meaning manuscripts not yet ready for submission). We encourage proposals from faculty in any field (including lecturers and library faculty), and we encourage interdisciplinary projects.

To apply to the RCRL Research Fellows program, please submit a two-page (maximum) expression of interest outlining the research project you would develop if selected along with your CV. Your expression of interest should include:

- Research project title
- Extended abstract including the principal topic, contributions to the literature, methodology and research design, and implications for practice
- How the research project relates to the mission of the Center and a consideration of the role of business in society (broadly defined)

- How the research project relates to the UN Sustainable Development Goals and/or Rowan University's DEI goals
- Tentative timeline, and in particular, an explanation of the work you will accomplish during the Summer 2023
- Potential publication outlets (at least two options)

Faculty may apply individually or as a two-person team. Applications are open to both tenured and tenure-track faculty at any rank as well as lecturers and library faculty.

Preference will be shown to interdisciplinary projects, but this is not a requirement to apply. A limited number of in-person/virtual meetings are anticipated over the duration of the fellowship period. Fellows will be expected to give a public lecture about their research project to demonstrate their findings in the 2023-24 academic year.

Fellows will receive a $1500 stipend for their participation.

Submit expressions of interest and a CV by May 15, 2023 to RCRL director Jordan P. Howell (howellj@rowan.edu). Proposals will be reviewed by an interdisciplinary team of faculty. Contact Jordan with any questions.

Decisions will be announced in early June 2023.
